Design based on the 1913 Buffalo Nickel

Design based on classic American coinage, but these rounds carry no
face value

Since being introduced in 1913 on the Buffalo Nickel, James Earle Fraser's design of a Native American chief and an American buffalo has appeared on numerous bullion products. This is one of the more exceptional examples, as this round features a high relief finish, highlighting the beauty and depth of the design.

High relief rounds feature exceptional detail that has a unique 3-D look and feel. This method is achieved by striking the Silver blanks multiple times under an enormous amount of pressure to capture every detail. This exquisite production process adds great appeal and collectibility to the .999 fine Silver content.

HIGHLIGHTS

- Design is based on James Earle Fraser's popular Buffalo Nickel design of Black Diamond.
